The title of the bill is amended to read as follows: “A bill to make technical corrections and miscellaneous amendments in certain education laws contained in the Education Amendments of 1978, and for other purposes.”

SUMMARY OF H.R. 4591

H.R. 4591 makes a number of technical and miscellaneous amendments to the Education Amendments of 1978 (Public Law 95-561) and other education statutes. Most of these amendments correct printing errors and clerical errors or change the dates for submission of reports to Congress. A few of these amendments attempt to rectify problems which have arisen due to oversights in the 1978 Amendments and which the Committee feels should be attended to before implementation of these amendments is too far along. All of these amendments are described in the section-by-section analysis contained in this report.

Among the minor substantive amendments included in the bill are two amendments clarifying the means for electing members of parental advisory councils under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act and reducing the volume of materials to be distributed to these councils and council members.

Other amendments revise the way in which States receive coordination money for the migrant program under Title I and guarantee each State a certain minimum amount for the program for strengthening State departments of education in Title V of ESEA.

The bill also makes certain technical changes to the Title XI Indian Education programs of Public Law 95-561 and permits the use of carryover funds under Title IV-B for guidance and counseling for one year only.

The bill also contains minor amendments to the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, the Vocational Educational Act, and the Career Education Incentive Act, to take care of technical and minor problems not anticipated when these programs were last amended.

EXPLANATION AND JUSTIFICATION OF H.R. 4591

Most of the technical and miscellaneous amendments contained in H.R. 4591 relate to Public Law 95-561, the Education Amendments of 1978. The bill also includes a few amendments to the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, the Vocational Education Act, and the Career Education Incentive Act.

Public Law 95-561, enacted on November 1, 1978, extends for five years and amends nearly all the major programs of Federal aid to elementary and secondary schools, including all the programs under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. It is therefore a very lengthy and important piece of legislation.

The majority of the amendments contained in the bill correct printing, drafting, and clerical errors in Public Law 95-561. Several amendments extend the dates of submission for reports mandated in that law. Because Public Law 95-561 took effect immediately upon its enactment late in the 95th Congress, these extensions are necessary to give the Administration adequate time to do a thorough job on these reports.

The remainder of the amendments contained in H.R. 4591 address minor problems that have arisen or have threatened to arise since passage of Public Law 95-561 and the other laws mentioned above. The Committee feels that, given the scope of Public Law 95-561, these minor problems should be dealt with early on, so that implementation of the legislation over the next four years will proceed more smoothly. The need for these amendments, other than the printing and drafting errors and the extensions of reports, is discussed below.

Title I parental advisory councils

The bill contains two amendments which revise two provisions for parental participation added to Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act by Public Law 95-561.

The first amendment clarifies the requirements for establishing district-wide level parental advisory councils. Current law states that these councils must have a majority of members who are parents of children to be served by Title I projects, must include representatives of children and schools which are eligible to be served but are not currently participating in Title I, and must be composed of members elected by the parents in each district.

However, it has come to the Committee’s attention that many districts are confused about how to implement these provisions in a way that is not overly burdensome or disruptive to the existing councils.
In particular, many districts are concerned that a district-wide election would be required by the Office of Education. Therefore, the amendment in H.R. 4591 seeks to clarify these provisions while retaining their intent. In particular, the new amendment explains in more depth the procedures for determining the make-up of the council.

Under the new amendment, the council will consist of three groups: (1) parents of children to be served by Title I, (2) representatives of children eligible to be served by Title I but not currently participating, and (3) other additional members. The new amendment retains the requirement that the Council have as a majority of its members parents of children to be served.

The Title I parent majority and the other additional members in the third group are to be elected either by the area or school level advisory councils or by parents of school-age children (and pre-school age children if Title I is funding a pre-school program), including parents of children attending private schools, in the Title I project areas.

The remaining seats on the council must be reserved for representatives of children and schools eligible to be served by, but not currently participating in, Title I projects. These representatives are to be elected by parents of school-age children in the areas eligible for but unserved by Title I. The seats reserved for the representatives of eligible but unserved children and schools should come from the minority membership of the council that is not required to be composed of parents of children to be served by Title I, in order to assure in the end result a Title I parent majority on the council. However, this does not preclude parents of children who are eligible for Title I but unserved to elect Title I parents to represent them. The only members of the council not elected by the area or school level councils or parents in the Title I project areas will be these representatives of the children and schools eligible for Title I but unserved.

It is further the intention of this amendment to permit the use of the so called “pyramid” structure in setting up the district level Title I parent advisory councils. Under this amendment it is permissible, but not required, for the members of each school level parent advisory council to elect one of their members to represent them on the district level council. However, there still would have to be an election held in which parents from the areas that are eligible for but unserved by Title I would elect their representatives to the district council.

Nothing in this amendment precludes either the parents from Title I projects or from the eligible but unserved areas from electing representatives to the district council who are not parents or who do not live in Title I project or Title I eligible areas, as long as at the end of the election process, a majority of the members of the council are parents of children to be served by Title I. In order to implement this amendment, there can be no requirement for residency within a project area for an individual to be eligible to be elected to a school level council. Otherwise, when the pyramid structure is used, individuals from outside Title I project areas and Title I eligible areas would automatically be excluded from eligibility on the district level council.

The Committee has directed the Commissioner to issue regulations showing alternative models which local school districts can follow. in complying with these requirements for parental advisory councils because we recognize the enormous diversity which exists among local educational agencies throughout the country. Rural school districts could be given some options to follow in fulfilling these requirements, while large city school districts could be given other options, but all school districts must comply with these general provisions in order to assure that parents have a voice in the operation of local Title I programs.

The second amendment regarding Title I parental participation would limit the distribution of the Title I statute, regulations, and materials to advisory councils and only to individual council members upon request. Presently, a district must distribute these materials to all council members. This amendment would therefore reduce the paperwork and expense of the distribution process but still insure that all council members have access to these documents.

Migrant coordination funds

The bill contains an amendment clarifying that at least $6 million but not more than 5 percent of the funds appropriated for the migrant program under Title I be set aside for coordination of State migrant education activities. Present law would authorize an amount not to exceed 5 percent of the total migrant program funds paid to States for the preceding fiscal year.

It is the intent of the Committee that the minimum of $6 million be divided in such a way that the Migrant Student Record Transfer System receive $3.4 million and that the activities carried out by the Office of Education in interstate coordination receive $2.6 million. As the setaside is increased above the $6 million, the Committee intends that these two activities receive comparable shares of the excess.

Title IV maintenance of effort

When Title IV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act was revised last year, there was an inadvertent omission of the requirement that States must maintain their current levels of financial support for State departments of education if those States are to receive Federal funds to strengthen the activities of these departments. H.R. 4591 corrects that omission and restores the requirement.

The requirement is included in the section of the revised law which mandates a maintenance of effort for States in order to receive Part B funds for library books and equipment and Part D funds for guidance and counseling. This amendment in no way modifies those two requirements for such maintenance of effort in current law; it simply restores the inadvertently deleted requirement for support of State departments of education.

Title V hold harmless

The bill contains two amendments relating to the program for strengthening State educational management which was newly authorized in Title V of ESEA by Public Law 95–561. The new legislation permits these State activities to be funded either under Title V–B or under Title IV–C of ESEA. Title IV–C was the exclusive source of State strengthening monies prior to the 1978 Amendments and was designated as the source for these funds for fiscal year 1979. Some conern has arisen on the part of State educational agencies that the Title V legislation is unclear regarding how these funds are to be allocated and what the minimum level of funding ought to be. For this reason, it is feared that Title IV does not represent a viable option to Title IV–C.

The amendments contained in H.R. 4591 would make the new Title V program comparable to the Title IV–C program’s State strengthening component. First, Title V is amended to insure that the amount appropriated is at least equal to the level of State strengthening money made available for fiscal year 1973. Second, a provision is included in Title V to guarantee each State the amount it received in fiscal year 1973 for these activities, and to allow the Commissioner of Education to distribute the excess on a discretionary basis.

Guidance and counseling

Public Law 95–561 separated funds for guidance, counseling, and testing from Title IV–B of ESEA, where they were formerly housed, and placed these activities in a new Title IV–D. Because this legislation was passed after the fiscal year 1979 appropriations bill had been enacted, no appropriations were made for fiscal year 1979 for Part D. (The Title IV programs are advance funded, so that funds appropriated for fiscal year 1979 are for use in fiscal year 1980.)

Although the President had requested that $18 million of the Title IV–B money already appropriated for fiscal year 1979 be transferred to the new Title IV–D, this proposal was not adopted as part of the fiscal year 1979 supplemental appropriations bill.

Therefore, in order to help districts more easily make the transition of guidance and counseling from Title IV–B to Title IV–D, H.R. 4591 contains an amendment to permit local educational agencies to use IV–B carryover funds for guidance, counseling, and testing only during fiscal year 1980. The revised so-called “Tydings Amendment” in the General Education Provisions Act now states that carryover funds must be spent in accordance with the statutory and regulatory provisions that are in effect for the year in which they are used. This amendment in H.R. 4591 will permit an exception to be made to this provision, for one year only, to take care of the unusual circumstances affecting guidance and counseling funds.

Experimental project waiver authority

The bill contains an amendment to permit the 13 local educational agencies which received a waiver of the usual Title I requirements in order to participate in the National Institute of Education study of Title I to continue their current practices during school year 1978–79. This one-year continuation will help these districts, whose demonstrations were quite useful in determining amendments to Title I last year, make a smooth transition to the new Title I legislation.

Indian education amendments

The bill contains a number of technical amendments to Title XI of Public Law 95–561, Indian Education. Title XI made several important changes in Federal Indian education programs. Oversight of Title XI in the 96th Congress revealed the necessity of enacting these technical and minor amendments. The amendments are explained in the section-by-section analysis contained in this report.
The Committee would like to note that Section 2(b)(1) of H.R. 4591 directs the Secretary of the Interior to pay any unpaid portion of any Johnson-O'Malley basic support contract or grant to each school which received a partial contract or grant payment in fiscal year 1978, if that school had a deficit in its budget for the school's operational year 1978 due to the failure of the Bureau of Indian Affairs to release the remaining funds for the basic support contract or grant.

The Committee would also like to explain that the purpose of the amendment in Section 2(b)(8) of the bill is to set in authorizing language a pattern for full implementation. This amendment balances the need for transition with the need for stability and the wish to minimize the damage to ongoing programs. Also, its presence in the Act will give assurances to those in the field that the formula will be implemented. It will allow for planning based on anticipated revenues generated by the percentages set in the law.

In writing this language, the Committee was guided by the excellent work of the BIA task force on formula funding. This work, which laid the framework and guidelines for this section, has been of inestimable value.

The percentages referred to in this section refer to situations of stable student population. The Bureau of Indian Affairs shall, in implementing this section, take such fluctuations into consideration.

Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act

H.R. 4591 includes an amendment which would correct an anomaly which presently exists in FERPA. The Department of HEW is now interpreting that legislation as precluding State auditors from requesting records on students in order to conduct State audits of local and State-supported programs. The Department has recognized that this situation hampers States in carrying out necessary audits and evaluations and has recommended that the Committee adopt this amendment.

Vocational Education Act

It has come to the attention of the Committee that some States are experiencing difficulty in meeting the requirements of Section 110(a) and (b) of the Vocational Education Act, as amended by the Education Amendments of 1976, Public Law 94-482. Section 110 requires each State to spend and match specified minimum percentages of its allotment under Section 102(a) for national priority programs. States must spend 10 percent for programs for the handicapped and 20 percent for programs for the disadvantaged. In addition, these funds must be matched dollar-for-dollar by the States.

Whereas many States have been able to generate additional matching funds for these purposes, some States have resorted to imposing some matching requirements on local educational agencies and other eligible recipients. In light of wide-spread State and local tax-cutting initiatives, however, obtaining matching funds has proven difficult for some States. As a result, States may be forced to return unexpended national priority program funds to the Federal Treasury.

This proposed amendment to the Vocational Education Act would help remedy this financial hardship by allowing the States, pursuant to regulations issued by the Commissioner, to exceed the fifty percent State-wide Federal share for programs and services for the handi-
