				To whom it may concern"
				I doubt you will answer this email as the TSA has not answered any previous emails from me in the past.
				How do I get an answer on WHY I am "Randomly Selected" for additional screening EVERYTIME my wife and I fly??Is it because I am on the TSA's "No Fly List"??
	•			Is the only way to obtain this information thru the courts??  Could a Senator or Congressman obtain the information for me and my wife??
				Is it because I am a WHITE Male??Or is it because I am 50 years old?? Is it because it has to look like the TSA screeners are doing SOMETHING, so they pull me aside and search me EVERYTIME we fly.
				Even tho, because of previous injuries to my Back, Neck, and Head,  (and the resulting surgeries to correct some of the problems.)
				I sometimes need additional time to get to my seat and put my things away.  Because I am "Randomly Selected" EVERY TIME, that time is not available to me

		,	MVIII .
				WHY is this?? Who has this information??Who would I talk to in Alaska about this??
				I also understand by sending this email,I will again be "Targeted" the next time we fly and be subject to additional screening just because I sent this email and question to the TSA.
				Thank you;

				It appears that random or pre-selection (S on boarding pass) is back in Detroit. This is a totalling ineffective way to guarantee the security of our airports and doesn't speak too highly of the normal security clearance procedures. If we have to pre-screen passenger, then this implies that our normal screening isn't working or has flaws.
	•			As a passenger I am troubled by a process that burdens those of us who fly frequently and doesn't help stop the problem that we are trying to alleviate. I am also disappointed that we aren't trying to better the process.

9-JUN- 004	90064 2	General Contact Information	Re: Profiling: Aerlingus	From: Sent: 19-Jun-2004 02:44:09 PM To: Tsa-ContactCenter@dhs.gov Co: AirConsumer@ost.dot.gov Subject: Re: Profiling: Aerlingus
·				Thank you very much for your reply and enclosed information. I am not so and agreement with and consent to any and all forms of airport security. I am just insulted that EVERYTIME that I get on an Aerlingus flight that I am "randomly" selected for search. As I have stated, if Aerlingus was randomly giving away free tickets, I know that I would NOT randomly receive a free ticket EVERYTIME that I flew Aerlingus. That being the case, why is it that EVERYTIME I fly Aerlingus am I (allegedly and presumptuously) "randomly" searched? This is my concern. I ignorantly assume that since Aerlingus' major hub is Dublin that they don't have a lot of Black people flying on their planes. What I am suggesting is that Aerlingus be brought into the 21st century and understand that not all Black people or non-whites are potential security risks. Many of us are upstanding and respectable members of society.

Can someone please help me? I am on the TSA No-Fly list. I am a frequent traveler and this prevents me from using on-line boarding processes. This is very frustrating. It takes the boarding agent 15-20 minutes extra to get me cleared for boarding. I have nearly missed one flight because of this. This ties up the boarding agent as well as everyone else in the line behind me. Traveling is difficult enough without this added inconvenience. Earlier this year I contacted TSA and was sent a form. I submitted the form and the required 3 notarized forms of identification to Virginia Skransky at TSA. I did not hear anything so I called the TSA and emailed the Ombudsman again on 6/2/04, but still did not receive a response. I called on 6/17/04 again and spoke to Monica who said Virginia was on vacation and would definitely call me ???next week???. On June 21, 2004 Lhad to travel from Florida to Connecticut for my father???s funeral. Leaving Orlando and leaving LGA on the return trip I had a wait in a long line at the counter to be cleared. As hard as this travel was, this made it much more difficult. Can someone please contact me? Melbourne, FL 32935 Home ??? Work ??? Cell ???

Subject: =?iso-8859-1?Q?Complaint: What=B4s the point=3F?= Dear Sir or Madam: Upon returning from the US yesterday, I could not but notice that my luggage had been searched by TSA officials. Again. Let me share with you a couple of thoughts and remarks concerning this fact. First of all, please note that I am very upset and feel intimidated by this repeated random search. It is definitely a great inconvenience and really annoying. (At least you find a note issued by the Dep. of Homeland Security informing passengers that their luggage had been opened & examined). I won't give you any of my flight details, since I'm very much sure that you do have access to all of my "relevant" data, credit card transactions (how much money I spent during my trip), where I staved, what I did and what kind of products I purchased. I'm sure you also know when I last crapped. I checked-in early for my flight, i.e. 2 hours prior to departure. Was that suspicious behaviour? I come to think that the TSA airport personnel had too much time on hand and nothing to do, so they probably must have decided to raid my stuff. What the hell were they expecting to find?? That I'd carry guns, bombs, explosives whatsoever? What is the point? Especially after already having my bags pre-screened, screened, xrayed, lasered and what have As the term "random search" implies, this technique is totally ridiculous. Why do I get checked, but

1 1 da 1 1 (1 da 1 da 1 da 1 da 1 da 1 d				a passenger one step ahead in my line gets through easily. What makes you sure that it is not that passenger that could be a potential "evil doer"?
				It is therefore totally insulting to me that you suppose I could be the bad guy.  What qualifies me to get searched at all?  I have so much travel experience, flying often and extensively. And I believe, especially after 9/11, EVERBODY knows that it is probably not a good idea to pack dangerous stuff into your

He stated that he had to be physically matched. He was told because his name is so common TSA flagged him for positive name match. He was calling from the ONT airport to confirm that whether or not he would encounter the same problems on his return trip home. I informed first that as long as he receives his boarding pass there's not too much to be concerned with, besides it sounds like extra precaution for heighten security. I also informed him that if he has to go through this at least 4 or more times to contact us back and we will assist and direct him accordingly. He was ok and understood the process.

The same snow that closed us down also left us with a backlog. You have raised several issues and I will try to respond to each. TSA is a Federal organization and your state elected officials won't be able to do anything to solve issues created by your Representative or Senator. There are several things that will trigger additional screening, some of them are initiated by the aircarrier. Others are initiated as a result of something showing up in the screening checkpoint. All of these procedures look the same so it would not be apparent to the average passenger which trigger caused any additional screening. The complaint that TSA is most interested in resolving is the search that was conducted involving food products. TSA is already hard at work on additional training of our screeners based on feedback such as yours from the traveling public. If we knew the date, time, flightnum

	. •			I am extremely unhappy with the way I was treated by Delta and (according to Delta) TSA, when I tried to board flight 1860 at Sea-Tac airport on July 1st.
				Part of my dissatisfaction is with the way Delta handled this; but if their claims are to be believed,
			* v	then I'm also dissatisfied with the way TSA handled things.

` '				twice Delta's self-service computer would not process my check-in, and then the human disingenuously claimed that there was just a problem with seating. Over the course of half an hour she finally admitted that I was on a no-fly list maintained by TSA, and that she wasn't able to process my check-in unless TSA agreed.
				I'm confident that there was a mistake here by Delta or TSA, and if Delta's information is correct then the mistake was by TSA.

	l			I'd like to know why this mistake wasn't processed and cleared up by TSA during the two and a half TSA has a responsibility to handle things a lot more efficiently than it is. Your delay could have made my miss the flight (which my wife was already checked in for). Delta, to my amazement, `		won't even refund the ticket if they deny me boarding due to TSA's directive. In addition, Delta says their security department is making the decision to refuse me boarding, but Delta will not

				Subject: Extensive ID checks at airline check-in Dear TSA.
				I am writing due to a consistent problem I encounter when checking in
	-			for either domestic or International flights. I fravel extensively for
*		3		business in the US, throughout Europe, and to the UAE(twice in 2003).
	-			When checking in for a flight, airline agents must consistently perform an extensive ID check, usually requiring between 15 - 30 minutes, before issuing my boarding pass.
				I was recently informed by airline personnel that the reason for this
		-		consistent, time-consuming check is due to my name being on a 'watch list' or 'no-fly list'. In all cases, I have been issued a boarding pass, but at the expense of considerable time investment on the part of the airline agent, myself, and the many other unfortunate airline •				passengers waiting to check in.
				I called the TSA Contact Center today and spoke to a very helpful individual (named John) who verified that my actual name is not on a 'no-fly list', but that there is some similarity to a name on the list,

		P	A second and therefore the extensive ID check is required.

				While I sincerely appreciate all the TSA is doing to ensure safe travel, please investigate this situation and provide a solution to this seemingly unnecessary, repetitious, time consuming ID check. Thank you very much!
